Section Two: The Executive’s Budget Proposal

Notes on abbreviations:
BY = budget year (year for which the budget proposals are being made)
BY+1 = one year beyond the budget year
BY-1 = one year before the budget year

Note 1: The Open Budget Survey research process was carried out over a 12-month period and the final version of the Open Budget Questionnaires reflect decisions made after multiple rounds of discussions between Survey researchers, peer reviewers, and the International Budget Partnership (IBP) (in several countries these decisions also considered comments received from governments). When peer reviewers or governments agreed with the answers provided by researchers, they often provided no comment. Thus for many questions, the section in the questionnaire that should contain peer reviewer comments is left blank. However, if the government did not provide any comments to a question (because it did not dispute the answer), the section within the questionnaire that is meant to reflect government comments specifies the answer that the government agreed with (by default).

Since the IBP continued its discussions with the researchers even after receiving peer reviewer and government comments, for some questions these discussions resulted in a mutual decision to change the answers, even if the peer reviewers and governments agreed with the original answer provided by the researcher. Such changes may have happened as a result of:

1. A more consistent application of the Survey methodology;
2. New information identified by the researcher or by IBP that had a bearing on the answer for a particular question; or
3. Decisions made to ensure cross-country comparability of answers.

For more information on these changes for any question please write to info@internationalbudget.org.
The Executive’s Budget Proposal

Estimates for the Budget Year and Beyond

1. Does the executive’s budget or any supporting budget documentation present expenditures for the budget year that are classified by administrative unit (that is, by ministry, department, or agency)?

   a. All expenditures are classified by administrative unit.
   b. Expenditures are classified by administrative unit, but some small units are not shown separately.
   c. Expenditures are classified by administrative unit, but a significant number of units are not shown separately.
   d. No expenditures classified by administrative unit are presented.
   e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Interviews with Saudi bankers, economists and former senior Ministry of Finance functionary

Comment:

There is an annual press statement issued in December when the budget is officially enacted by the cabinet. This press statement is issued shortly before the fiscal year begins on January 1. The press statement is issued by the Ministry of Finance and published by major national newspapers. The statement indicates the aggregate levels of income and expenditure of the previous year and expected income and the sectoral breakdown of planned expenditure for the new budget year (education, health, municipalities etc.). The sectoral figures are divided into current and capital expenditure. Usually, allocations for specific non-ministerial government organizations are also provided. The information is broadly helpful, but very generic. This is the only publicly available document on a Saudi budget when it gets enacted, although some further figures on planned spending are usually issued through the government’s Statistical Yearbook further into the budget year.

The purpose of Questions 1-55 in the questionnaire is to evaluate the information that governments make public in their executive’s budget proposal and supporting documents during the time that the budget proposal is under consideration in the legislature -- prior to its enactment. This set of document is sometimes known as the annual consolidated budget presentation.

However, there is no elected legislature in Saudi Arabia, and the appointed “Majlis Ash-Shura” does not have budgetary powers. (Its most daring act so far was to refuse a planned income tax on foreigners in 2003, which met great resistance in business circles who rely mostly on foreign workers). There have been some demands from the Majlis to be granted budgetary powers, but its mid-term prospects to receive them are rated as rather dim, especially as the recent oil boom has obviated the need to impose any taxes that might be politically contentious. Some Majlis members reportedly also do not want to deal with budgetary issues as they are afraid of becoming privy to corruption in the process.

As such, no executive’s budget proposal and supporting documents is made available to the public prior to the budget’s enactment. All pre-budget government documents about planned annual spending are secret. Questions 1-55 have been mostly marked as “d” to reflect this practice (with the exception of a few questions that have only three possible response options. The latter have been marked as “b” to reflect the lack of publicly available information.) Where appropriate, remarks are added as to where specific types of information are available OUTSIDE of the executive budget proposal.

   Comment:

   Estimates of aggregate levels of expenditure over five-year periods are presented in the Ministry of Economy’s Development Plans (currently the 8th Development Plan, 2005-2009). The plan is available on the internet (http://www.mep.gov.sa/index.jsp;jsessionid=766CE5CE2CF6DDCD033CB46A5DD3F127.alfa?event=ArticleView&Article.ObjectID=3). These documents are released every five years and are not part of an executive budget proposal; the spending guidelines (in chapter 4, broken down by five broad categories of spending) are indicative and usually not adhered to by the Ministry of Finance in its annual budget negotiations.

Government debt is domestic and held by private banks and public investment funds; while the Monetary Authority issues monthly figures on banks' claims on the government, a consolidated breakdown of government debt is not available, and no specific figures are available on the total amount of government bonds outstanding.

57. Does the executive make available to the public an analysis of the distribution of the tax burden?

   a. Yes, a detailed analysis of the distribution of the tax burden is presented, including both a narrative discussion and quantitative estimates.
   b. Yes, an analysis is presented, highlighting key aspects of the distribution, but some details are excluded.
   c. Yes, some analysis is presented, but it lacks important details.
   d. No analysis on the distribution of the tax burden is presented.
   e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

   Citation:
   See question 56.

   Comment:
   The only taxes currently levied are Islamic wealth tax on companies (zakat) as well as income tax on foreign businesses. There is no personal income tax and no VAT. Most state income is derived from international oil sales. While tax rates are easy to find out (see question 56), a quantitative breakdown of different parts of non-oil state income is not available, hence the tax burden's distribution is impossible to estimate. Non-oil state income - including income from state-owned companies - is presented as an aggregate figure in the Monetary Authority's annual reports.

   Researcher Response to this Question was "c"

   Peer Reviewer One Comment:

   Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question is "b."

   Peer Reviewer Three Comment:

   Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire “c.” I chose my answer because I believe that “distribution” refers to which strata and sectors of business and population at large bear which burden in aggregate terms. Such information is not publicly available.

   IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer “c” because this question is asking about whether an analysis of the distribution of the tax burden across different segments of the population (typically arrayed by income) is provided. Since this information is not publicly available, the correct response is “c.”

Comment:
There is an annual press statement issued in December when the budget is officially enacted by the cabinet. It is issued by the Ministry of Finance and published by major national newspapers. The statement indicates the aggregate levels of income and expenditure of the previous years and expected income and the sectoral breakdown of planned expenditure for the new budget year (education, health, municipalities etc.). The sectoral figures are divided into current and capital expenditure. Usually, allocations for specific non-ministerial government organizations are also provided. The information is broadly helpful, but very generic. This is the only publicly available document on Saudi budgets at the time of enactment. Here is the December 2008 statement for the FY 2009 budget in English:
The equivalent Arabic document had already disappeared from the Ministry's website at the time of writing and could not be retrieved through the site's search function.

Comment:
There are no conventional bureaucratic accountability mechanisms in Saudi Arabia (ombudsmen etc.). There are options to sue state agencies through the “Board of Grievances” or to petition the appointed quasi-parliament (the “Majlis Ash-Shura”) or senior princes. None of these formal and informal mechanisms are tied to an explicit right to receive government information however, and they are not usually used to that end. The only formal document listing civil rights in Saudi Arabia, the Basic Law, contains no right to information:
The State Department’s 2008 report on human rights in Saudi Arabia points out that there are no laws guaranteeing citizens’ right to access government information:
http://www.state.gov/g/drl/rls/hrrpt/2008/nea/119126.htm
64. Are citizens able in practice to obtain financial information on expenditures for individual programs in a format that is more highly disaggregated than that which appears in the executive’s budget proposal if they request it (for example, from a ministry or agency)?

a. In practice, highly disaggregated information is available to the public for all programs except those considered related to national security or military intelligence.
b. In practice, highly disaggregated information is available to the public for programs representing at least two-thirds of, but not all, expenditures.
c. In practice, highly disaggregated information is available to the public for programs representing less than two-thirds of expenditures.

See questions 63 and 61. Ministries usually do not have press staff or official speakers (there are a few exceptions, such as health and interior, but their speakers perform press work rather than tending to citizen inquiries). Information departments in state agencies usually limit themselves to printing general brochures about their organizations. The Ministry of Finance’s Arabic website has detailed information on various public projects, broken down by sector and government agency, but without giving figures on the associated spending (http://www.mof.gov.sa/ar/docs/contracts/index.htm).

Interviews with Saudi bankers and former senior Ministry of Finance functionary, survey of Saudi press and official websites since 2003.

Comment:
The budget statement (cf. question 60) is usually released in the second or third week of December on a Monday night after the cabinet meeting which ratifies the budget, but the exact date is not announced in advance. A select few people, such as senior bankers, are apprised of the date a few days ahead. Distribution happens through the Saudi Press Agency and the Ministry of Finance.

Article 76 of Saudi Arabia’s Basic Law states, “The law shall determine the State’s fiscal year. The budget shall be issued by a Royal Decree which shall spell out revenue and expenditure estimates for the year. The budget shall be issued at least one month before the beginning of the fiscal year. If, owing to overpowering reasons, the budget is not issued on time and the new fiscal year has not yet started, the validity of the old budget shall be extended until a new budget has been issued.” (http://www.mofa.gov.sa/Detail.asp?InNewsItemID=35299). Thus while a particular date is not specified, the equivalent of a “no later than” formulation set in permanent law means there is a clear deadline. In the past six years, the announcement of the budget has occurred within a relatively close range of dates: 12/22/2008, 12/10/2007, 12/18/2006, 12/13/2005, 12/08/2004, 12/15/2003.

Interview with senior Saudi bankers and Majlis Al-Shura members; my own research on parliamentary politics in Saudi Arabia.

Comment:
There is no elected legislature in Saudi Arabia. The appointed "Majlis Ash-Shura" does not have budgetary powers (its most daring act so far was to refuse a planned income tax on foreigners, which met great resistance in business circles who rely mostly on foreign workers). There have been some demands from the Majlis to be granted budgetary powers, but its mid-term prospects to receive them are rated as rather dim, especially as the current oil boom has obviated the need to impose any taxes that might be politically contentious. Some Majlis members also do not want to deal with budgetary issues as they are afraid of becoming privy to corruption in the process.

Comment:
The only substantive consultations happening are those between line agencies and the Ministry of Finance, as well as between the Ministry of Finance and the royal court. Intra-governmental budget negotiations usually start in autumn (September or October), when line agencies submit their spending proposals to the Ministry of Finance. Even these line ministries are usually not aware of the budget demands and negotiations of agencies other than themselves, and ministers only see the full budget draft when it reaches the cabinet for ratification. The Ministry of Finance is the dominant player in the budgeting process, and it is highly secretive. There is no involvement of the public.

Comment: Such reports are not released and according to my interviewees not even produced internally. What exists in terms of mid-year follow-up is merely an internal aggregate expenditure number the Ministry of Finance sticks to in order to limit excess spending beyond the levels appropriated in the annual budget. Comment:
There are great differences depending on the government agency. Defense and Interior are almost completely opaque, while in other cases (large infrastructure, utilities etc.) bidding has become more competitive, although implementation of the process is often ad hoc can be heavily dependent on international consultants. Smaller tenders can often be non-transparent.
Saudi Arabia has not subscribed to WTO rules on government procurement. It is generally recognized that “big players” (i.e. princes and well-connected courtiers) play a role in many consortia applying for big tenders, but the government creates some level of competition by at least inviting bids that involve many different well-connected factions that hence have to compete among themselves on price and quality. There is very little international and no local reporting on this however.

The State Department's 2008 investment climate statement on Saudi Arabia reports that: “Foreign firms have identified corruption as an obstacle to investment in Saudi Arabia. Government procurement is an area often cited, as is de facto protection of businesses in which senior officials or elite individuals have a stake. Bribes, often disguised as “commissions,” are reputed to be commonplace.” (http://www.state.gov/e/eeb/ifd/2008/101779.htm)

Transparency International ranked Saudi Arabia 80 out of 180 countries in its 2008 Corruption Perceptions Index.

A 2004 procurement law has made the publication of tenders obligatory; a new government procurement law and corresponding bylaws were issued in 2006/07 following WTO accession in 2005. The procurement process in non-royal government agencies, especially for flagship projects in the electricity, water and transport sectors, is often seen as better organized than in poorer neighboring countries. Some foreign businessmen report a positive impact of e-tendering on certain smaller contracts.

   Comment:
   There are no formal supplementary budgets; the Ministry of Finance rather releases funds to other agencies on an ad hoc basis, either by going beyond the agreed aggregate spending or by releasing funds that other agencies have not used up fully. The government's aggregate overspending (the only known figure at the end of the year) has hovered around 15% of budgeted annual spending in recent years. See also question 82.

Executive’s Year-end Report and the Supreme Audit Institution

- a. The report is released six months or less after the end of the fiscal year.
- b. The report is released 12 months or less (but more than six months) after the end of the fiscal year.

Comment:
See question 60 - the only figures that are released at the end of a budget year are aggregate expenditure and income for the year, which are part of a general budget statement. “Closing accounts” detailing actual spending have not been available since the Gulf War 1990/91. Even internally, they are usually only produced after two or more years, although they are reportedly quite detailed (several thousand pages) and well-organized. Most of the auditing is limited to checking accounts however; there is little performance auditing. A formal year-end report is not released.

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: The Annual Report issued by the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency SAMA, which is referenced in the comment to question 104, contains limited data on actual budget outcomes from the previous year, specifically in the “Public Finance” section of the report (pp.127-136). The 2009 SAMA report discusses some of the projections and actual outcomes from the 2008 budget, and was published in July. Nonetheless, I agree with answer “d,” as the SAMA report does not seem to meet the threshold for consideration as a year-end report, especially in light of the “closing accounts” mentioned above.

Peer Reviewer Three Comment:
102. In the year-end report have the data on the actual outcomes been audited?
   a. Yes, all data on actual outcomes have been audited.

   c. Less than two-thirds of the data on actual outcomes have been audited.

The internally produced closing accounts appear to be very detailed, but they are not published and their circulation even within the government is very limited.

Comment:
The section for revenues in the closing accounts is rather short (only some 10-20 pages long in the late 1990s accounts, which were several thousand pages long altogether), due to the overwhelming role of oil income and the absence of income tax, VAT and conventional corporate tax. In any case, they are not published.

Revenue projections apart from the multi-year estimates in the five-year plans are generally not published.

Comment:
They are never released to the public. The "closing accounts" as produces by the General Auditing Bureau ("diwan al-muraqaba al-'ama") usually take between two and four years to produce, and their circulation is strictly limited even within the government, in particular since the 1990/91 Gulf war. See also question 101.

Although the Saudi government has designated the General Auditing Bureau as a member of the United Nations International Organization for Supreme Audit Institutions (INTOSAI), suggesting that it is the country's external auditing body, in fact this body is not independent of the executive and its functions more closely resemble those of an internal audit body.

According to Article 21 of the Constitution of the General Auditing Bureau (regarding the Annual Audit Report), "The annual report [...] is to be submitted to His Majesty the King with one copy to be sent to the Council of Ministers and another one to the Ministry of Finance and National Economy" (http://www.intosaiitaudit.org/mandates/mandates/Mandates/Saudi%20Arabia.html#Saudi_Arabia_22).

The formulation on the auditor's website is: “The GAB’s Charter had established it mandatory that GAB’s Auditees Should provide all accounting records, financial statements and other documents and information available at the disposal of GAB’s auditors to enable the auditors discharge the Audit tasks with impartiality and objectivity[...]The Charter had imposed it on the Auditees to provide replies on GAB’s observations within a specific timeframe not to exceed a month of-date of reporting such findings.” (http://www.gab.gov.sa/article_e.php?id=32). Comment:
The budget is determined through negotiations with the Ministry of Finance as is the case with other agencies (see question 70). Royal court and cabinet technically have the final say. There is no evidence that it is particularly under-resourced - its limitations, such as they are, are rather of a directly political nature.

118. Does the Supreme Audit Institution employ designated staff for undertaking audits of the central government agencies pertaining to the security sector (military, police, intelligence services)?

a. The SAI employs designated staff, and the staffing levels are broadly consistent with the resources the SAI needs to fulfill its mandate.
b. The SAI employs designated staff, but the staffing levels are a cause of some constraints to the SAI in fulfilling its mandate.
c. The SAI employs designated staff, but the staffing levels pose a significant constraint on the SAI in fulfilling its mandate.
d. The SAI does not employ designated staff for auditing of the security sector, or does not undertake audits of the security sector.
e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Comment:
There is a dedicated department within the general auditing bureau for military sector auditing. The General Auditing Bureau's leverage over security sector agencies is in fact very limited, however, as the latter are controlled by senior royals running the institutions as their personal fiefdoms. The Bureau might be used to investigate specific departments or procedures, but de facto only on the request of the senior princes in charge of the respective agency. Staffing levels hence are not the primary problem.

119. Does the Supreme Audit Institution maintain formal mechanisms of communication with the public to receive complaints and suggestions to assist it in determining its audit program (that is, to identify the agencies, programs, or projects it will audit)?

a. Yes, the SAI maintains mechanisms of communication with the public, and received more than 100 communications from the public during the past year.
b. Yes, the SAI maintains mechanisms of communication with the public, and received less than 100 but more than ten communications from the public during the past year.
c. Yes, the SAI maintains mechanisms of communication with the public but it receives very little (less than ten) or no information from the public on potential subjects for audit.
d. No, the SAI does not maintain any formal mechanisms of communication with the public.
e. Not applicable.

Comment:
A copy of the annual report of the General Auditing Bureau is submitted to the Majlis Ash-Shura after being submitted to King and cabinet. It contains generic information on the financial performance of all auditees, i.e. all state agencies. This is however rather generic information which is different from the “closing accounts” that detail actual spending and which are not released to the Majlis. The annual report’s information on security agencies is limited in particular.

There are no other formal mechanisms that oblige the Bureau to report to the Majlis. The Majlis might receive some auditing results from individual agencies when inviting them to report about their activities, but the level of detail varies, with security agencies in particular providing very little information.

Peer Reviewer One Comment: This question, as I understand it, addresses whether the audit reports are viewed or scrutinized, rather than the level of detail contained in the reports. Therefore, a more appropriate response to this question is “c.” As noted in the comments above, “a copy of the annual report... is submitted to the Majlis Ash-Shura.” Section Five of the GAB Charter (http://www.gab.gov.sa/article_e.php?id=32) states: “The Annual Report is referred to the Consultative council for review and detailed discussion in the presence of GAB’s senior staff invited to account for and respond to enquiries, “Should it be so required.” Because “there are no other formal mechanisms that oblige the Bureau to report to the Majlis,” answer “c” (which was used in the 2008 version of this questionnaire) is proposed over some of the stronger ones.

Peer Reviewer Three Comment:

Researcher Response: I chose my answer because the annual report for the General Auditing Bureau does indeed contain general observations about the state’s fiscal management. At the same time, it is not really an audit report, as it does not contain the actual audited figures from the GAB’s investigation of government income and spending (the “closing accounts”), which are kept secret even within most of the government bureaucracy and are usually produced with significant delay. “c” therefore is an appropriate compromise.

IBP Comment: This question asks whether there is a committee in the legislature that has the specific task of receiving and reviewing the SAI Audit Reports. Since the GAB’s Annual Report does not contain the actual audited figures from the GAB’s investigation of government income and spending, the correct response to this question is “d.”
121. Does the executive make available to the public a report on what steps it has taken to address audit recommendations or findings that indicate a need for remedial action?
