Drawing on internationally accepted criteria developed by multilateral organizations, the Open Budget Survey uses 109 equally weighted indicators to measure budget transparency. These indicators assess whether the central government makes eight key budget documents available to the public online in a timely manner and whether these documents present budget information in a comprehensive and useful way.

Each country receives a composite score (out of 100) that determines its ranking on the Open Budget Index – the world’s only independent and comparative measure of budget transparency.

How comprehensive and useful is the information provided in the key budget documents that Canada publishes?

Canada provides the public with substantial budget information.
Transparency alone is insufficient for improving governance. Public participation in budgeting is vital to realize the positive outcomes associated with greater budget transparency.

To measure public participation, the Open Budget Survey assesses the degree to which the government provides opportunities for the public to engage in budget processes. Such opportunities should be provided throughout the budget cycle by the executive, the legislature, and the supreme audit institution.

The questions assessing participation in the Open Budget Survey 2017 were revised to align them with the Global Initiative for Fiscal Transparency’s new principles on public participation, which now serve as the basis for widely accepted norms on public participation in national budget processes. Therefore, data on the extent of public participation in budgeting in the Open Budget Survey 2017 cannot be compared directly to data from earlier editions.

Canada’s score of 39 out of 100 indicates that it provides few opportunities for the public to engage in the budget process. This is higher than the global average score of 12.

The Open Budget Survey examines the role that legislatures, supreme audit institutions, and independent fiscal institutions play in the budget process and the extent to which they are able to provide effective oversight of the budget. These institutions play a critical role — often enshrined in national constitutions or laws — in planning budgets and overseeing their implementation.

These indicators were revised to better assess the role of formal oversight institutions in ensuring integrity and accountability in the use of public resources. Therefore, data on the role and effectiveness of oversight institutions in the Open Budget Survey 2017 should not be compared directly to data from earlier editions.

To what extent does the legislature in Canada provide budget oversight?

The legislature provides limited oversight during the budget cycle. This score reflects that the legislature provides weak oversight during the planning stage of the budget cycle and adequate oversight during the implementation stage of the budget cycle.

Oversight by an Independent Fiscal Institution

Canada’s Office of the Parliamentary Budget Officer serves as the independent fiscal institution (IFI). Its independence is set in law, and it reports to the legislature. It publishes analyses of the state of the nation’s finances, the government’s spending plans, and trends in the economy as well as cost estimates of selected proposals in Parliament’s jurisdiction.

The main barriers to effective legislative oversight are:

- The Executive’s Budget Proposal is not provided to legislators at least two months before the start of the budget year.
- The Executive’s Budget Proposal is not approved by legislators before the start of the budget year.
- A legislative committee does not examine in-year budget implementation.

To what extent does the supreme audit institution in Canada provide budget oversight?

The supreme audit institution provides adequate budget oversight.

- Under the law, it has full discretion to undertake audits as it sees fit.
- Moreover, the supreme audit institution is provided with sufficient resources to fulfill its mandate, but its audit processes are not reviewed by an independent agency.
- Finally, the head of the institution is appointed by the legislature or judiciary but can be removed without legislative or judicial approval, which calls into question its independence.

RECOMMENDATIONS

For more detailed information on the survey findings for Canada, please see the Open Budget Survey Data Explorer at survey.internationalbudget.org.

How can Canada improve transparency?

Canada should prioritize the following actions to improve budget transparency:

- Produce and publish a Citizens Budget.
- Present expenditures by functional and economic classifications compatible with international standards and provide more detail for multi-year expenditure estimates in the Executive’s Budget Proposal.
- Provide more information on the government’s liabilities and the sustainability of its finances over the longer term in the Executive’s Budget Proposal.
- Increase the information provided in In-Year Reports and the Mid-Year Review.
How can Canada improve participation?
Canada should prioritize the following actions to improve public participation in its budget process:
- Pilot mechanisms for members of the public to provide input into monitoring the implementation of the national budget.
- Hold legislative hearings on the Audit Report, during which members of the public or civil society organizations can testify.
- Establish formal mechanisms for the public to participate in relevant audit investigations.

How can Canada improve oversight?
Canada should prioritize the following actions to make budget oversight more effective:
- Ensure the Executive’s Budget Proposal is provided to legislators at least two months before the start of the budget year and that the budget proposal and the Main Estimates are better aligned.
- Ensure a legislative committee examines in-year budget implementation and publishes a report presenting its findings and recommendations.
- Ensure that the Audit Report is published six months or less after the end of the budget year, which would allow legislators to scrutinize the prior year’s outcomes before voting on the new budget.

The survey is based on a questionnaire that is completed for each country by independent budget experts who are not associated with the national government.

The draft responses to each country’s questionnaire are then independently reviewed by an anonymous expert who also has no association with the national government.

In addition, IBP invites nearly all national governments to comment on the draft responses and considers these comments before finalizing the survey results.

Researchers respond to comments from peer reviewers and their government, if applicable, and IBP referees any conflicting answers in order to ensure consistency across countries in selecting answers.

The government of Canada provided comments on the draft Open Budget Questionnaire results.

The Open Budget Survey uses internationally accepted criteria developed by multilateral organizations from sources such as the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the International Organisation of Supreme Audit Institutions (INTOSAI) and the Global Initiative for Fiscal Transparency (GIFT).

It is a fact-based research instrument that assesses what occurs in practice through readily observable phenomena. The entire research process took approximately 18 months between August 2016 and January 2018 and involved about 300 experts in 115 countries. The Open Budget Survey 2017 assesses only events, activities, or developments that occurred up to 31 December 2016. The survey was revised somewhat from the 2015 version to reflect evolving methods for disseminating budget information and to strengthen individual questions on public participation and budget oversight. A discussion of these changes can be found in the Open Budget Survey Global Report (see link below).

Survey responses are typically supported by citations and comments. This may include a reference to a public document, an official statement by the government, or comments from a face-to-face interview with a government official or other knowledgeable parties.
